Shirakami Mountain: the Beech Tree

- As big as 27,600 Tokyo Domes.
- World's largest virgin forest.
(Logging and plantations are not done in the Shirakami Mountains.)
- Deciduous broad leaf tree.
(They have more water holding capacity than a coniferous forest)
- It's blessed with seafood thanks to the water which begins to spring from a grove of beech trees.
- It's also used for musical instruments and furniture

The traditional form is also inherited today!

Summary

We felt that if the Shirakami Mountains, full of precious animals and plants, such as the serow, which is a special national monument, and the black wood pecker, which is an endangered species, were spread, people around the world be interested, not only those in Japan.

- Future challenges include:
- Increasing publicity and ease of access to the Shirakami Mountain Range.
- Decrease in the number of guides due to depopulation.
- It is necessary to accept immigrants as a measure against depopulation.

Reason

We want everyone to know the attraction of the Shirakami Mountains.
We want to deepen our understanding because we live in a town near the Shirakami Mountains.

About world Heritage

It's necessary to appeal for "the universal value".
Something of human commonness, the treasure which should endure for future generations.
